THE M'NAMEE TRIAL.

His Case With That of Gaul Fixed for Hearing To-Morrow.

HISTORY OF THE KILLING.

It Occurred Nearly a Year Ago and R ulted from a Family Difference-Mr. Archer Fined.

The trial of Thomas N. McNamee and William T. Gaul, both of whom are charged with the murder of Robert Lee Atwell, comes up in the Hustings Court porrow at 11 o'clock. Although the case has been postpened from time to for various reasons, it is thought that the examination will begin to-mor row morning. Great interest has been centered in this case because of the promipence of the persons connected with i and the peculiar circumstances leading up to the killing.

On the 29th of December, last year Robert Lee Atwell, a yard-conductor of the Richmond and Danville railroad, was called out of a little watch-house at the corner of Twenty-eighth and Dock streets and shot and killed by McNamee. Nearly eleven months have elapsed and the trial

MR. SMITH WILL DEFEND. Immediately after the shooting McNamee went to the Second Police-Station and gave himself up. He soon afterward employed Messrs, H. M. Smith, Jr., and Hill Carter to defend him. Since then Mr. Smith has been elected to the office of Commonwealth's Attorney, but he feels that he is in duty bound to represent the accused, and with Mr. Carter will do so to-morrow.

Mr. Smith has engaged the services of Messrs. D. C. Richardson and Marion I. Dawson to prosecute both McNamee and Gaul, and these gentlemen are prepared, it is understood, to go ahead with Both the people of Richmond and those Manchester are deeply interested to of Manchester are deeply interested in the result of this trial. McNamee was sident of the city across the James a resident of the city across the James as was Atwell. The men were close neigh-bors. Both had business in Richmond. McNamee ran an upholstering establish-ment on cast Marshall street, and Gaul, the alleged accomplice in the crime, was at one time one of his employees.

STORY OF THE KILLING. On the evening of the murder, if murder it was, Gaul and McNamee met in Richmond, and the latter invited his former employee over to Manchester to take supper with him. This was accepted, and after the evening meal McNamee suggested a walk, Gaul was agreeable to this proposition, and the two strolled out, and talked about various matters, among them a previous unpleasantness between Messrs. Atwell and McNamee. From what can be learned concerning this controversy, it seems that a little son of McNamee was playing with his tricycle in Atwell's yard one day, and that Atwell drove him out, but allowed the machine to remain upon his premises. Mrs. McNamee subsequently went over to the home of the Atwells, and demanded to know why the child had been sent home without his tricycle. It is alleged that Mr. Atwell made a disagreeable reply to Mrs. McNamee, and that this the cause of the trouble.

McNamee made several attempts to see find that the yard-master was not at

THE FATAL NIGHT.

On the evening of the 29th, however, McNamee determined to find Atwell, and went to his place of work, at the foot of Twenty-eighth street, and had Gaul to call the conductor out of the little watch-house, where he was sitting, at supper. Atwell walked out, and was invited across the street, where he met the upholeterer, and the difficulty transpired. A large black stick will be introduced in evidence by the defence, it is broken near the middle, and the accused claims that this was due to a blow dealt him by Atwell before the shooting took call the conductor out of the littl the case was to go to the watch-house with McNamee to settle an unpleasant-ness with the yard-conductor. He declares that he had no idea that a fatal affray was going to be the result, and that had he known it he would never have gone with his former employer. The case has attracted widespread attention, and will probably consume several days' time in its trial. The two indictments against McNamee and Gaul will be taken up separately, that of the former being

Mr. Archer Heavily Fined. Mr. Archer Heavily Fined.

Mr. Wister Archer, principal of the University High School, was tried in the Hustings Court yesterday on the charge of cruelly beating one of his pupils, Carter Ozterbind, son of H. Carter Osterbird, who resides at No. 200 cast Carystreet. The case consumed the entire day in this tribunal, and the jury found a verdict of $25 fine against the accused. Mr. Archer was represented by Mr. C. V. Meredith and Mr. H. M. Smith, Jr., Conmonwealth's Attorney, conducted the prosecution. The question involved was the extent of a school-teacher's right to prosecution. The question involved was the extent of a school-teacher's right to Iunish a scholar. A number of witnesses, it cluding young Osterbind's parents, went on the stand and testified as to the condition of the lad when he returned home from school on the day of the trouble referred to.

home from school on the day of the trouble referred to.

Mr. Archer stated upon the stand that he had borne with the boy and endeavored to make him study his lessons, which he would not do. The school-teacher finally went to him and told him if he did not learn his lessons he (Archer) would shap him. To this the pupil took exception, and Mr. Archer executed his breast. Osterbing teleked up an Iron exception, and Mr. Archer executed his threat. Osterbind picked up an iron leck, as if to strike his school-teacher with it, and the two clinched. Accord-ing to Mr. Archer's testimony the lad fell to the floor and bruised his face.
The jury w s only out a little while, returning a verdict as stated above. The fine was paid by Mr. Archer.

Good Business Ahead.

the election is over, for which buyers were waiting, there is a good business ahead. Sentimental improvement is already preswaiting, there is a good business shead. Bentimental improvement is already present. The next development to be expected is an improved demand and freer trading. The week under review has been uneventful in every selling centre. For three weeks there has been a dwindling in the volume of business, and salesmen have heard much of the desire of their customers to wait for election. Some businessmen, indeed, have been holding for the same reason, preferring to take their chances on a more spirited market after a protection victory, rather than push their sales on the weak market that has been experienced of late.

PULLMAN PALACE-CAR COMPANY. Change of Venue from Judge Gibbons

Court Granted. CHICAGO, November 17 .- Judge Gibbot this morning granted the Pullman Palac Car Company a change of venue from his court in its petition filed some weeks and in the quo warrance proceedings brought by the Attorney-General. In granting the petition the Judge said: "I grant it of the naked petition, denying the legal right of the defendant to a change of venue on account of insufficiency of the application, as the affidavit can be considered as surplus."

The action of Judge Gibbons brings to en end the first chapter in a bitter figh by the Pullman Palace-Car Company When the petition was filed by the Attor ney-General, charging that the company was fliegally using its charter by fliegally engaging in other business, the Pullman Company, through its counsel, demurred to the petition. Long arguments were made on the demurrer, and the Attorney. General filed pleas to the demurrer. General filed pleas to the denutrer. Be-fore these pleas were argued the Pull-man Company applied for a change of venue from Judge Gibbons, claiming that the Judge was prejudiced against them, which was evidenced by his remarks in a book written by him entitled "Tenure and Toll.

A Card from Rev. Curtis Lee Laws. BALTIMORE, November 15, 1894. To the Editor of the Dispatch:

The Religious Herald of November 15th quotes the following from your paper as a part of an address made by me at a recent meeting of the Maryland Baptist General Convention:

let us pay them better for their work, and thus enable them to give their own money to support their own religious enterprises. I know that down in Lou doun county, Va., where I used to live a negro man sets only about $12 a month as a farm hand. You know that such wages leave very little to be given religious objects."

I quote at length that, in connection,
I may state just what I did say:

In the first place, I was not delivering an address upon political economy, was appealing to my brethren to more generously to the support of more generously to the support of our missionaries among the negroes. I did not say that we ought to give the negroes better wages. What I said was this: "You cannot expect the negroes to support intelligent pastors upon the kind of wages that they receive. If we want the right kind of missionaries to go among our colored brethren, we must pay in part for their support. I know that down in Loudoun county, Va., where I used to live, a negro man gets, not $12, but from $8$ to $12 a month as a farm hand. You know that such wages leave very little to be given to religious obvery little to be given to religious objects. So let us contribute liberally to the support of their ministry."

Dr. Dickinson here interrupted me, and said: "Brother Laws ought to know that many white men get no better wage than the negroes in Loudoun county.' I immediately answered: "That is imma I immediately answered: That is imma-terial; I am not speaking upon the wages question. Those white men who get such wages have not upon them the burden of the support of their churches. Their more able brethren bear the burden. There are few able negroes down there, so we must help them support their ministry."

their ministry."

Now, Mr. Editor, I am sure you will give space for these words. Dr. Dickinson is not more a Virginian than the writer. Dr. Dickinson knows no more of the struggles of the farmers of Virginia than I know. He would speak harshly of them as soon as would one whose much-loved kinsmen are among them. The change of a few words in a sentence changes the meaning of the sentence. Sincerely yours. tence. Sincerely yours, CURTIS LEE LAWS.

This action grows out of Lieutenant Halstead's continued absence from the drills of his company, of which Captain George P. Shackelford is the commanding Geo officer. Noticing the fact that the Lieutenant had not been present for several weeks when his command was drilling, Colonel Jones called upon Captain Shackleford for an explanation, and upon ascertaining the facts addressed an offiial letter to Colonel Nalle, charging Lieutenant Halstead with conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline and with having broken article of war No. 33, which prescribes that officers and enlisted men shall attend every drill of their com-

A Study in Wirdow-Dressing.

Window-dressing has become an art. It is not easy to make an effective presentation of goods, even where many colors, soft and voluminous dress fabrics and laces and ribbons are at command. It is, therefore, readily understood that the dressing of the windows of a gentlemen's clothing store so as to get artistic effects is an exceedingly difficult task. Taste and design and originality have to supply a vast deal that is lacking in the material, no matter how rich and handsome it may be in itself. The windows of A. Saks & Co. have always been one of the attractions of the city. In them marvellously-pretty displays have been gotten, No. 35, daily, Fast Mail, for all points South and Southwest, will leave Richmond at 12:30 P. M.
